About the Artist

Geir Jordahl is an artist, teacher and dedicated traveler. Both his personal and commercial photography is a reflection of his passion for light and life. In his photography, Jordahl explores his relationship to space and experience by interacting with its periphery through the use of panoramic vision. His engaging compositions speak both to the specifics of place and to the imagination. The journey is an integral part of his work both figuratively and literally. Jordahl was born in Norway and he currently lives in the San Francisco Bay Area with his wife, photographer Kate Jordahl.

Selective major exhibitions include Modernbook Gallery, Palo Alto, California; Kodak Gallery, Tokyo, Japan; Olive Hyde Gallery, Fremont, California; Ansel Adams Gallery, Yosemite, California; Museum of Modern Art, Tampere, Finland; Museum for Photography, Braunschweig, Germany; University of Oregon Museum of Art, Eugene, Oregon; Nevada Art Museum, Reno, Nevada; Ansel Adams Center for Photography, San Francisco, California; The Golden State Museum, Sacramento, California; Fresno Museum of Art, Fresno California; Haggin Museum, Stockton California; Trenton Museum of Art, New Jersey, among others.

About the book

Searching for True North is a selection of work from 30 years of Jordahl's photographic imagery. On this lifelong journey he follows his internal compass to discover the universal landscape, those places that are not separated by their cultural or political borders but united in their celebration of the Earth and it's interaction with human-made elements. The journey is also one of self-realization. Jordahl is inspired by place but the work is not place-specific, it is the reflection of his personal experience of the interaction between Man and Earth, and the awareness of oneself in terms of the Earth. The search for "True North" represents the spiritual as well as the physical, the journey of discovery that leads to one's path in life as well as the path that leads to the next magical place.
